“Bully” as he was affectionately called was reared in a Christian home and his family although limited by material wealth, possessed the uncommon riches of a strong faith in God, impeccable integrity, and a firm belief in hard honest work. He was educated in the public schools in Sumter County and later attended Manhattan Tech, Brooklyn, New York, majoring in Electronics.

Janerette was a veteran of World War II. Drafted his Senior Year into the U.S. Navy, where he attended the Naval Cook and Bakery School from 1943-1946. In Sumter, Janerette's uncle became ill and asked him to returned home to run his uncle's store (Rabbit Brown). One day a beautiful young lady, Annie Mae Wilson caught his eyes and he knew that she would be the love of his life and wife. They were married on July 18, 1952 and moved to Brooklyn to live for over 40 years. To this union ten children were born.

Janerette was a quiet, soft-spoken, knowledgeable, loving, devoted, compassionate husband and father. His love for his wife was undeniable. This walking encyclopedia was full of wisdom; there was not a question that he could not answer or an answer that he would not give. Bully showed support for his family and his friends.

September 14, 1982, Janerette retired after 33 years of government service with 27 years with U. S. Postal Service, Brooklyn, New York.

After returning to Sumter, he joined Mt. Moriah United Methodist church, where he served faithfully on the Male Choir, United Methodist Men and Chair of Trustee until his health began to failed and Janerette was named Father of The Church .

Janerette was a member of the American Legion Post #15 of Sumter.

Bully was an excellent cook and baker. Everyone enjoyed his bread pudding, sweet potato pie and stuffing. No holidays were complete without these items on the table. He deeply loved reading and music.
