“ When I was younger, I was asked a question regarding the measure of a man. I didn't understood the question, but I would soon learn from men like my uncle Jim. He taught me the value of God, family and life. He used always say to me that I was worth the love. It was those words that taught me how to be a man. There are wonderful people in this world, but uncle Jim was exceptional... Always with a smile and a kind word for you. His love of God and the church was and will always be his defining stature for me... He taught me to always put God first no matter what I was going through. Uncle, Jim I know you are with God and he happy to have you... I love you and will keep you in my heart until my dying day...
